BLOOMFIELD, N. J. FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 3, 1875.

IN BUSINESS HOURS.

Vol. III. No. 34.

"It's a poor head that cannot bear glass of wine," said the young man. "Few heads can bear it in business hours." was the reply. "So take a friend's advice, Howard, and let the wine

The last speaker was past the meridian of life. He had a care-worn face, and deep, thoughtful eyes. If you studied his countenance when in repose, you read in many of its lines a record of disappointment and heartache. The other was a handsome young man, with clear, confident eyes and a self-poised air. You saw that he had faith in himself-was hopeful and strong, and meant to win in

Why do you say in business hours, Mr. Clarkson?" inquired the young man, as he held the wine near his lips.

"Because success in business require clear head; and no head is as clear after a glass of wine is taken as it was be-

Mr. Clarkson said this so gravely and suppressively that his companion was struck by his manner, and felt that he spoke from painful experience. He stood irresolute for a moment, and then set down the untasted glass of wine. "Right, my young friend!"

There was a tone of satisfaction in Mr. Clarkson's voice.

"But," said Howard, as he moved back om a table covered with the daintiest refreshments and the choicest wines surrounded by beauty and fashion-"I see many of our business men here, and they are taking wine freely. At a bridal reception no one can refuse." "The occasion does not lessen the danger." Mr. Clarkson answered. "Some men who go away from here this morning will be poorer by nightfall than when they came. "In the chance of trade and speculatwo months and more, an' I've got her at last. She puts on a good deal of style, but if you've ever heard of Nance Brown, one of the 'cutest thieves on the coast, here she is. I'd have taken her quietly, but if she wants to make a row, it's her own business. I'm Detective ---, and here's my warrant."

"Oh, this is intolerable," cried the poor lady, bursting into tears of indignation and shame. "Gentlemen, my hus band, Mr .- , is on the train. Go find him, for heaven's sake !"

There presently appeared about the wildest-looking lawyer outside of Stockton.
